The Morning Music Study club has issued an attractive year book, which has some interesting points as a course of study outline. The work is systematically arranged, and all topics are treated orally—no written papers, and the style of the arrangement of the book is something after the fashion of the Roycrofters.

The programs are made up with the omission of the names of the performers so that the attention may be given more to the composer than the interpreter of the pleces. The members believe that a more serious and earnest atmosphere is created than when the performer is exalted above the composition. Attached to the book is a small pencil, and between the pages are small blank sheets, so that the members can take notes during the meetings.

At the meeting of the U. and I. club new officers were chosen. Mrs. Charles Mitchell was elected president to succeed Mrs. Pritchard and Mrs. Albert T. Beld was chosen secretary to succeed.

Mitchell was elected president to succeed Mrs. Pritchard and Mrs. Albert T. Reid was chosen secretary to succeed Mrs. Chester Woodward. Three women elected to membership are: Mrs. W. A. Morton, who was formerly a member and is returning to the club, Mrs. J. C. Mohler and Mrs. Charles Barnes.

The club will pass its twenty-eighth anniversary in November, and in place of the regular anniversary party this year, the club has decided to give its energies to making the course of lectures successful. It is the club's annual undertaking to raise funds for its year's work in the field of charity for the purpose of which the society was organized and maintains its existance. Among the cleverest and most interesting entertainments that mark the season's social life from year to year, are the affairs managed by this club.
